Etel Adnan at Callicoon Fine Arts

You fly for hours and and hours, and then take a train a few more to Documenta 13, in Kassel, Germany, and in Documenta Halle come across an absolutely stunning room with small, luminous abstraction paintings by an octogenarian Lebanese writer and artist named Etel Adnan. She's never had a show before in New York. And then, a few weeks later, you hear that Callicoon Fine Arts is showing a handful of those works, which frequently depict—with just a few carefully laid fields of color—Mount Tamalpais, near San Francisco. Ideally, a Dia-like institution would acquire a bunch of these and put them on view in a single location in the city for the next few decades.
