'i won't wait for grey hairs and worldly cares to soften my views'

The Middle East's wild boys, Ramin and Rokni Haerizadeh with Hesam Rahmanian, bring their satirical-pastiche style to the USA. The Iranian trio annihilates any delineation between practice and life, transforming Callicoon into an installation with their typical mix of every flavour, colour and visual under the sun as an 'exhibition-cum-theatre'. On display: video, painting, sculpture and collage on every surface from American, European and Iranian culture aiming to redefine power, activism, identity and desire. With their chaotic aesthetic, they master creating immersive-bordering-on-suffocating environments; this is best visited with an open afternoon and wide open eyes.
